Is Christmas all about Gifts and Presents?

Every year millions of children send letters to Santa asking for lots of presents costing hundreds and sometimes thousands of pounds, but is this what Christmas is REALLY about? Spending lots of money, wanting more and more gifts each year? Or is there another meaning to Christmas? Should Christmas be about spending time with your family and loved ones, having fun and laughter with them? It is estimated that one in seven children in the U.K do not receive a gift or present on Christmas Day, yet some children have an average of £370 spent on them each year. In the U.K alone, it is estimated that the cost of presents bought each year comes to a whopping £78,000,000,000 (that's BILLION!). That's means if shared equally, every child in the U.K would receive at least 2 gifts each!

So this Christmas, instead of pestering your parents for the latest Xbox ONE console, or a Disney Frozen Ice Castle, why not ask to spend some time with your family and loved ones playing a board game or watching a Christmas film. Also, instead of buying lots of expensive Christmas decorations, why not make some of your own? You could make your own garlands or paper chains to decorate your house or room.

So remember, Spend time with your loved ones and may be not want as much?!
